The 45-story octagonal One Sixty Madison features 319 rental residences and panoramic views of New York City.

NEW YORK CITY — J.D. Carlisle Development Corp., in partnership with DLJ Real Estate Capital Partners and Mitsui Fudosan America Inc., has launched leasing at One Sixty Madison, a new residential tower located in NoMad, at the nexus of Chelsea, Gramercy and Midtown. Designed by SLCE Architects, the 45-story octagonal building features 319 rental residences in a mix of studios, one- and two-bedroom homes. The interior spaces, which were designed by Philip Koether Architects, feature floor-to-ceiling windows, oak floors and panoramic views. On-site amenities include the Three Sixty Lounge atop the building, an indoor fireplace, two expansive rooftop terraces, a 14,000-square-foot Park Lounge, a fitness center, valet and concierge services, bicycle storage and a fully attended lobby.
